

1. When applying any design pattern, think about the problem it solves for you. The factory method pattern describes the interface for a factory but lets subclasses decide what group of products to actually create. Do you need multiple subclasses of factories to construct different groups of shipment types?

